

FieldService PLUS

“Having problems locating service providers for challenging customer locations? PlusOne has you covered...”

Customer service is becoming a critical requirement for businesses to retain customers and increase revenues in today's tightening global economy. To provide quality customer service, organizations are required to build and maintain complex field service networks to support their product and service offerings to meet the real-time customer service expectations of today's consumers.

Today's service organizations are being asked to provide excellent customer service while minimizing service overhead costs. This creates a difficult balance. If a service organization responds to budget constraints by reducing the size of its service network, the result is often delayed response times, missed service appointments, or multiple visits to a customer. In turn, this directly leads to degradation of customers' perception of quality and brand.
